

Bruce Hyland

Business Mentor to Drs. Kano and Brio

Bruce Hyland is a retired entrepreneur, corporate businessman, educator, author, and speaker. His doctorate is in organizational leadership and he has published three books, written numerous articles, and was a sought-after seminar leader. He was the department chair of Management Studies for City College of San Francisco, was department chair for The Small Business Institute at City College of San Francisco, and was director of the Small Business Development Center of San Francisco.

He was an international management consultant and specialized in an anthropological approach to organizational development and leadership.

He started three businesses, and likes to say that it took him three times to “get it right.” His last business was sold to a NASDAQ company. He still enjoys sharing his insights with other entrepreneurs and business owners/managers.

He makes his home in Tucson, AZ, tends his roses, and acts as a volunteer facilitator and consultant for local non-profit agencies.

Dr. Hyland acts as an informal mentor to Drs. Kano and Brio. He is not a principal, contractor, or director for acunum.
